Lembah Bujang, situated in Merbok, Kuala Muda, Kedah, stands as a significant early entrepot and religious center within Malaysia, offering an alluring invitation for extensive archaeological exploration. Nestled between the towering Gunung Jerai to the north and the flowing Muda River to the south, its historical eminence emanates from its pivotal role as the heart of the Old Kedah kingdom and a crucial crossroads for east-west trade routes. Spanning an expansive area of 224 square kilometers, Lembah Bujang is richly adorned with vestiges of the Hindu-Buddhist faith, manifesting in revered temples such as Candi Pengkalan Bujang, Candi Bukit Batu Pahat, and Candi Pendiati. Stretching from Cherok Tok Kun in the South to Bukit Choras in the North and encompassing an even broader expanse of 450 square kilometers, the Bujang Valley encapsulates Malaysia's multifaceted historical narrative, inviting both scholars and enthusiasts to immerse themselves in its captivating past. This convergence of strategic positioning, historical significance, and religious heritage renders Lembah Bujang an unparalleled heritage site for unraveling the mysteries and intricacies of Malaysia's early civilizations.
